Leaks caused by ice dams

It is recommended that the entire roof be covered by Bakor Eaveguard® Self-Adhesive Shingle Underlayment where high snow loads or heavy rains are expected.

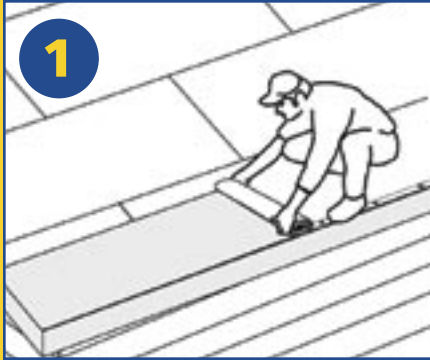

Leaks caused by wind driven rain

Bakor Eaveguard® Self-Adhesive Shingle Underlayment is a rubberized membrane that protects where shingles don't. During the winter, ice and snow accumulate in vulnerable areas on your roof. As temperatures warm up, ice dams can cause the water from thawed ice and snow to back up under the shingles and leak into your home.

Wind driven rain can be blown under the shingles, also causing leaks and interior damage. Bakor Eaveguard® Self-Adhesive Shingle Underlayment provides a waterproof shield between the shingles and the roof deck in vulnerable areas including: skylights, vent stacks, valleys, eaves, ridges, hips, low slope and dormer areas.

Installation: Apply Bakor Eaveguard® Self-Adhesive Shingle Underlayment to roof surfaces that are to be covered by shingles or other roof coverings on the same day.

1 Align membrane at eave. Where a metal edge strip is being used, install underlayment over the metal at the eave and under at the rake.

2 Fold membrane to expose release film. Remove the split release film from lower portion. Set membrane in place.

3 Remove the release film from top portion and set in place.

4 Extend membrane a minimum of 300 mm (12") beyond inside wall [600 mm (24") in more severe areas of freeze/thaw] or 900 mm (36") from eave. Overlap 100 mm (4") on side lap and 150 mm (6") on end laps.
